A signature program for the Division of Campus Life, the Faculty-In-Residence (FIR) program at Clairmont Campus is an essential component of academic engagement within the residence halls. Each FIR establishes a community where students and faculty interact in casual and purposeful program settings to promote and facilitate out-of-classroom learning. As a member of the FIR program, faculty members commit to living in faculty apartments and offering a variety of programs. Four faculty members serve as FIRs at Clairmont Campus by offering ongoing, immersive living and learning programs to residents. These FIR living-learning programs include:

- Dr. Irene Browne's Sex and Sexuality program
- Dr. Patrick Cafferty's Maintaining an Active Lifestyle program
- Prof. Anna Leo's Living with the Arts program
- Dr. Tracy McGill's Bridging Academics, Service, and Ethics (BASE) program

Governance:
Dr. Frank Gaertner, Director of Programming and Learning Initiatives, leads a FIR Advisory Committee to review the program and to manage the FIR recruitment process.

Criteria for consideration:
- Status as a full-time, regular faculty member
- Willingness to commit to a two-year agreement as a FIR at Clairmont Campus
- Offer monthly programs for residents
- Participate in FIR-related meetings and development activities

Application:
Download and complete the following: http://www.emory.edu/HOUSING/FORMS/PDFs/FIR_application.pdf
Applications are due by FRIDAY, APRIL 11, 2014 to Dr. Frank Gaertner at fgaertn@emory.edu

Programming Funds:
- $2,000 per academic year for monthly programs

We seek a diverse group of full-time, regular faculty who work collaboratively with our residential staff to create thought-provoking, interactive, and educational events where students can talk, work, and learn together. If you are interested in joining the Faculty-in-Residence (FIR) program for a two-year commitment, please submit a vita and letter of application to Dr. Frank Gaertner at the contact information below by Friday, April 11, 2014.

In your letter of application, please address the following topics:

1. What interests you about the Faculty-in-Residence program?
2. Have you lived on campus as a faculty member or administrator? If so, please describe these experiences.
3. What non-teaching activities or interactions have you had with students (e.g., study abroad, residence hall program, dinners)?
4. What special skills, qualities, or experiences would you bring to the Faculty-in-Residence program?
5. Each Faculty-in-Residence offers programs around an interdisciplinary theme related to one of five core values of Residence Life and Housing. These five values are social justice, sustainability, responsibility, learning, and connections. For example, Dr. Patrick Cafferty sponsors programs on “Maintaining an Active Lifestyle”, while Prof. Anna Leo offers programs on “Living with the Arts”. (You can read more about all four current programs at http://www.emory.edu/HOUSING/LLC/fac_fir.html.) For the 2014-15 academic year, we are seeking one faculty member to work with the current Bridging Academics, Service, and Ethics (BASE) program and a second faculty member to develop his/her own program. If you are interested in running the BASE program, what programming ideas do you have for this theme? If you are interested in starting your own theme, what ideas do you have and what kinds of events could support these themes?
6. How would you implement these and encourage students to attend the events you sponsor? Events can be social, educational, cultural, focused on careers/academics, or other topics.
7. Have you toured the Clairmont Campus?

Please visit the Living-Learning Communities web site for more information at: www.emory.edu/HOUSING/LLC.

If you wish to tour the Clairmont Campus (including the FIR apartments), please contact Dr. Gaertner.
