Academic Honor 2004 Conference Oxford College February 20-21, 2004

This conference is for a select group of small liberal arts colleges and universities to come together at Oxford to discuss the challenges, rewards and responsibilities of creating an honorable community on our campuses.

Through presentations and small working sessions, students and faculty will have the opportunity to discuss their campuses' practices and policies regarding academic integrity.

The conference also gives student Honor Council members an opportunity to meet with their peers at comparable institutions.

New to this year's conference, a mock trial provides an opportunity to observe and compare judicial procedures and outcomes.

Conference participants are encouraged to bring t-shirts and other college embossed items for door prizes.

Oxford College

Emory University is unique among major research universities in offering two academically equivalent options for entering students.

Oxford College, on the site of Emory's original campus, founded in 1836, enrolls approximately six hundred students.

Oxford offers an opportunity for students to do their first years of study in a small liberal arts environment and then complete the final two years of their bachelor's degree at Emory's Atlanta campus.

Consortium members

- Birmingham Southern College
- Emory College
- LaGrange College
- Lyon College
- University of the South
- Wesleyan College
- Davidson College
