“Slavery in Unusual Places”

Leslie Harris
Associate Professor of History &
African-American Studies & Winship
Distinguished Research Professor

In the United States, we tend to think of slavery in very set ways: the South; rural plantations; cotton. However, Winship Distinguished Research professor, Leslie Harris, has examined slavery in the North and in southern urban settings and has found enslaved people in a variety of occupations in those places. Join her for a presentation on her research on slavery and the role of African Americans in the history of the United States.
